

Bio:

I grew up in northern Maine, near the Canadian border. I studied Economics and Classics at Bowdoin College in Maine. Upon graduation, I accepted a position in the Corporate Banking Training Program at BayBank and moved to the Boston area. I remained with BayBank for 15 years, with my last position being Senior Vice President and Director of Large Corporate Lending.

When BayBank was sold in 1996, I took the opportunity to take what I thought would be a little time off and travel with friends. During that time, I met my husband, and we moved to Paris with our then 9-week-old daughter, Grace! When we returned, I accepted the position of Vice Chair of the Bowdoin College board of trustees, having served on that board for a number of years.

As our daughter approached the end of her high school years, I knew it was time to pursue a hobby in which I had always had an interest....bridge! I was fortunate to learn from some great teachers who inspired a real love of the game. Many thanks to Parul Jain, Jori Grossack, and Stuart Whittle who had the patience to help me learn the basics early on, and encouraged me to play.
